this fascinating book explores the bodily expression of emotion in worldwide and culture specific contexts linguistic theory since the cognitive revolution has followed one of the premises of that revolution by largely sidelining the issue of emotions and concentrating on those aspects of language that are more strictly cognitive however during the last ten years research in cognitive science especially in neuropsychology has begun to fill in the gaps left by the exclusion of emotions from cognitive research the work of those like oatley zajonc damasio and ledoux to name a few has demonstrated both that it is possible to construct models of how emotions play into the workings of the psyche and that they are necessary in giving us a balanced view of the human mind language feeling and the brain attempts to apply the fruits of this new research in emotion to our understanding of language itself building on karl pribram s integrated model of emotions and motivations the book takes an eclectic approach to explaining how emotions contribute to the nature of language drawing on research done in neuropsychology philosophy cognitive linguistics anthropology and related fields its aim is to construct a propositional model for how the emotions may have contributed to the emergence of symbolic formation most especially in the forms of gesture and speech and how identifying that emotional influence sheds new light on everything we have had to say about language itself from lexis and grammar to culture and literature before emotion the language of feeling 400 1800 advances current interdisciplinary research in the history of emotions through in depth studies of the european language of emotion from late antiquity to the modern period focusing specifically on the premodern cognates of affect or affection such as affectus affectio affeccoun etc an international team of scholars explores the cultural and intellectual contexts in which emotion was discussed before the term emotion itself came into widespread use by tracing the history of key terms and concepts associated with what we identify as emotions today the volume offers a first time critical foundation for understanding pre and early modern emotions discourse charts continuities and changes across cultures time periods genres and languages and helps contextualize modern shifts in the understanding of emotions alarge scale investigation on how multilinguals feel about their languages and use them to communicate emotion combining quantitative and qualitative approaches the author looks at the factors that affect multilinguals self perceived competence attitudes communicative anxiety language choice and code switching the miracle of children s language development and the joy of expressive language on the one hand and the vulnerability of language and the sorrow and grief caused by its distortion or even loss in people with aphasia or dementia on the other hand show us the inseparability of emotion and language in its extremes although the emotional turn promised a paradigmatic shift from a rationalistic towards an emotion integrating conceptualization of language hardly any interdisciplinary research has focused on the interplay between emotion and language the present book covers the wide range of work on emotion in language with contributions from numerous disciplines in the three areas of theory research and application with contributions both from well known pioneers in the area of this topic as well as from young scientists the book offers a broad range of perspectives from linguistics and language development to neurology psychology and developmental neuropsychology and to the fields of philosophy and phenomenology
