what should i do how should i deal with this how should i behave how should i act we ask ourselves daily but this is only the first part of the sentence while the full sentence is what should i do to achieve such and such for example to complete an assigned task to do well before my boss or a client to be pleased with myself to carry out my plans to make money in the stock market to pass an exam to complete an application etc these and similar questions that people ask consciously or not openly or not are decisions what skills must we master especially when there is a need to make not only elementary decisions but also decisions that affect the existence health and even lives of people first laszlo zsolnai writes that we should acquire the skill of gaining knowledge only then will we stand a chance of reacting to things that are improbable today but could become a fact tomorrow also essential is the skill of designing i e preparing actions conceptually in order to make decisions before irreversible changes occur finally it is essential to master the skill of multidimensional judgment within the space defined by effectiveness efficiency and ethics this is zsolnai s attempt to build a model of making ethical decisions both effectively and efficiently therefore the model is much broader than purely an analytical framework would be it must tell us how to act rather than limit us to reflection on actions already performed it must combine decision and praxiological analysis of human conduct the proposed model enlarges the scope of the debate and suggests new avenues of both rational and responsible decision making this is an original statement of the crossover of policy and morality americans are fixated on the idea of choice our political theory is based on the consent of the governed our legal system is built upon the argument that people freely make choices and bear responsibility for them and what slogan could better express the heart of our consumer culture than have it your way in this provocative book kent greenfield poses unsettling questions about the choices we make what if they are more constrained and limited than we like to think if we have less free will than we realize what are the implications for us as individuals and for our society to uncover the answers greenfield taps into scholarship on topics ranging from brain science to economics political theory to sociology his discoveries told through an entertaining array of news events personal anecdotes crime stories and legal decisions confirm that many factors conscious and unconscious limit our free will worse by failing to perceive them we leave ourselves open to manipulation but greenfield offers useful suggestions to help us become better decision makers as individuals and to ensure that in our laws and public policy we acknowledge the complexity of choice this issue aims to portray justify advance contrast and illustrate research programs in the domain of cognitive decision making under risk and uncertainty where such research programs are intended to promote theories models or conceptual frameworks for prediction of empirical observations descriptions of empirical results likely or rationalized to lead to predictions e g models with free parameters whose values are part of a hypothesis to be tested or cross validation of descriptive model results generalizations of many specific empirical results normative models alternative to expected utility theory eut replications of published results concerning any of the above any of the above may concern any aspect statistic of empirical data including individual or group behavior itself e g prediction of people s actual choices differences or difference in rankings of individual or group behavior distribution of responses for the general purpose of promoting scientific understanding of individual or collective human behavior in the domain of decision making under risk or uncertainty in particular this issue may shed light on the controversy between behavioral economics and cognitive economics the first relates to kahneman and tversky's program of heuristics and biases and the normative model of formal rationality whereas the second is connected to simon gigerenzer and vialle's program of simple adaptive heuristics and the normative model of ecological bounded rationality both of which aim to improve economics on a cognitive basis saul smilansky presents an original treatment of the problem of free will which lies at the heart of morality and human self understanding he maintains that we have most of the resources we need for a proper understanding of the problem and the key to it is the role played by illusion the major traditional philosophical approaches are inadequate smilansky argues their partial insights need to be integrated into a hybrid view which he calls fundamental dualism common views about justice responsibility human worth and related notions are radically misguided and the absurd looms large we do however find some justification for enlightened moral views and grounding for some of our most cherished views of human nature the bold and perhaps disturbing claim of free will and illusion is that we could not live adequately with a complete awareness of the truth about human freedom illusion lies at the centre of the human condition the necessity of illusion is seen to follow from the basic elements of the free will issue helping keep our moral and psychological worlds intact smilansky offers the challenge of recognizing the centrality of illusion and trying to free ourselves to some extent from it this is not only a philosophical challenge but a moral and psychological one as well this work offers an introduction to ethical theory by discussing morality in terms of living the best life with humour and a jargon free style the author examines the methods and central moral questions of philosophy readers become involved in genuine philosophical arguments through a dialogue format that includes a series of conversations with resurrected philosophers in these conversations readers critically evaluate moral theories as the philosophers articulate their positions
